Short Description	David Sansing is professor emeritus of the University of Mississippi. Sansing has been an expert witness for the defence in seven tobacco-related cases, although during cross-examination in Boerner v. Brown and Williamson in 2003 Sansing acknowledged that he had also been involved in Schuts and Walton and a number of other tobacco-suits that had never gone to trial. In addition, he declared that he had made over $500,000 as an expert judicial witness in tobacco litigation. ¹ Sansing stated in a deposition taken for Horton v. American Tobacco that he charged the tobacco companies $125 an hour for tobacco related work. ² By 2003 his hourly rate had more than doubled to $300. ³
